

The Bark in The Road

Driving on the road I encountered an algorithm of barks every few scores. Somehow, My passenger fore-wheel had to hit those barks. Now I found out that when I slowed down - coming from a high speed - and hit the barks it damage my wheel alignment. however when I accelerate coming into these barks I was able to trample them without damage to my vehicle wheel alignment.

The spirit of the Lord God show me that to show me that when I am on the phone calling people about my business, the barks will come. If you step on your brakes coming up on them that will damage your wheels, and - because your wheels are damaged - slow you down or discourage you because of the limp. However, if upon coming upon the bark you accelerate (set your head above an trampose happily) you will defeat those barks.

Could this mean that some of the very same people that was refusing will be turned around? Well its the same barks that would have defeated you and put you out of alignment that was transposed into defeated alternative. Remember! You perceived the bark before you came upon it. Therefore, the decision of how to handle it came to mind in advance, Therefore we can turn wrong into right by this proper approach.

Watched Seeds That Never Grows

Well after my mind had escaped and I went to another land to somewhat of a higher purpose in the spiritual, I returned from there and when I checked my network platform I discovered that now my uploaded videos were getting quite a bit of likes (souls were being saved there).

Then after that I paid attention to the success I made and start checking it again frequently, then the liking stops. Then that discourages, and that discouragement damages my spirit.

This one seems a little harder to explain why this is so - so I pend the answer to this. I would say that you cannot advance against failure when you are trying to advance from the place where the failure is. If you cannot advance against failure from the place where the failure is being experienced, then neither are you mentally equip there to design an instrument against the failure itself.

Therefore, I predict that the answer is:

- Don't fail to finish because you do not see where the success of what you're doing is going. The thing is not designed to work at that place, neither is it designed to work at a trial. The spirit world is the world of truth and purpose, it wont function in response to test. Furthermore, you are functioning in doubt - without closure
- Closure doesn't come without the close. Maybe the very reason why the thing is not working, is because you're trying to get closure, but you haven't closed.
- The operatus of a plan comes when the plan has come together, and the universe knows when. The universe cannot be uni without verse neither can it be verse without uni. The whole thing that depends on the whole thing has to be the whole thing first, because if its part of the thing it is not the whole thing, and if its not the whole thing it is not universal, and if it is not universal it lacks the power to overcome. Therefore, failure is aligned with unfinished works.

A good example of the spiritual world taking everything serious - it finishes what a man starts - is the point of anger where grevious words stirrs up anger and wrath, weve seen this every time. When a manm is angry and swearing the police is likely to be just around the corner, because the universe is ready to bring about his arrest and contain him. Fights starts with arguments, where words are swelling but not swell, and emotions that turns into motions.

Actors are not realy acting - because the spiritual world is not with the lack of seriousness - they are participating in what they are doing, and they are likely to become what they act. As such was the case of Aliah (the singer/actor), who plays the role in a horror film and that role became in her real life where she was haunted to death. If an actor is not that deep into his/her acting where they become who they act then that person is no good at acting. This makes acting a very dangerous profession....

Hoping Through Idolization

People come in front of that which their hands had made, expecting from those things, believing that the power for those things to produce come from the things themselves. They have not realised that the things made were made for a purpose, and that which they work for is that purpose itself. Therefore, the thing that works may not work for other things than for the purpose it was made. Man take those things to use them for other purposes and called them failures when they do not work.

Except a man advance to the place where he needs to be at in the time where he needs to be there, he has no authority and no power to command anything for that matter. His instruments are not toys, he cannot just use them for his own pleasures or use them outside of the purpose for which these things were given to him.

Sex, for instance, is not for pleasure but for reproduction, and the man and the woman' to be separated from each other for a period of time, once every month. There should be no sex where there is no purpose... However, that's a different peddling we'll deal with in further writings.

Where had I written before, that where a man deems a thing to have power in itself - without the purpose and higher recognition of that purpose given by whose order this thing came about - the thing he hoped in became his idol, and that issues in the lawless ness of death. Failure is part of the law-lessness of death...

The man who boast about his abilities without recognizing God as the source is heading for defeat, and the humble shall defeat him...

In The forms of Doing Good

Good hearts that were meant to love people, thought of positive objectives for those people, because the good hearts cared. However, while those good hearts cared for those people, those people cared only for themselves. Now then there comes a time where the end result manifestation of a good intended must become a good gone wrong. The same lawlessness on which the idols punished had become the lawlessness under which the good is punished, and the doer of the good had lost because of the idolatry he/she had committed in deeming those as higher wile the lacked the substance and contents of virtue.

Therefore, part of a man's loss and his sure failure, is because of the unloved that he loved. That lawlessness in what he had attached himself to, had destroyed his path to victory. Depression and indignity shall be in that place where he had gone to learn his lessons, that valley where his environment had become, shall be a lonely hurtful place. Nevertheless, he shall not stay in that valley, because from there he had seen his error and had been taught his lessons in life. After a while the man shall rise unto his salvation, and as long as he remembers where his good had taken him, the snakes shall no longer bite.

God only can judge them that have it all and kept it to themselves, because God only knows their hearts, there are many that had been to the value and sought the need to protect themselves.

There are two types of people that suffers in life:

- one is the bad and selfish intent that knows no harmony, and is cursed because
- the other is the good with generous intent that pays no attention to the wisdom and reasons why the should avoid the assistance of the former.

There was the well known story of the scorpion and the turkey. There is no such thing as a good decisions made upon a good heart, anymore than there is a good decision made upon a bad heart. This is because a bad heart cannot make good decisions but a good heart can make bad decisions. Therefore, good decisions are not made with good hearts but with good judgement. The bible stated that "in a great house there are not only vessels of Gold and Silver but some of wood and clay. If a man, therefore, purge himself from these he shall be a vessel of honor, sanctified and made ready for the work of God".

All that means that the argument of not being a malice keeper makes no sense, because there are people you must stay away from. Your salvation depends on this, both your salvation on the earth and your salvation after the earth. When you are in the valley - as aforementioned - you are in hell, because if you die in that state that depressed spirit cannot arise to be in the presence of the most high. Bad dreams and nightmares are associated with that state of mind, and when a person's spirit is affected by bad dreams and nightmare that is because the spirit cannot be elevated.

Devils are not necessarily that which a man cant see, but they are people in the flesh, who are connected to devilish ideas and they can pass that on, so much that your spirit can become miserable, even though its the good you did that brought you to this place of misery.

In order for good people to live a good spiritual life there must be a scrutiny of your friendship with others. Many of your friends are not yet tested, and they are only friends because they have not been tested.... so much more to say here! ...
